RIWHE Breakfast Event with Dr. Agnes Doody

University of Rhode Island, University Club

Kingston, RI

Thursday, October 8, 2009

8:30 a.m. – 11:00 a.m.

Conflict occurs almost daily in both our professional and personal lives. Unfortunately too few of us have developed the skills needed to work to resolve the conflicts in which we find ourselves. Thus, we tend to avoid them, pushing them under the rug. We all know what happens when something is pushed under the rug: it grows. The focus of Agnes Doody's presentation will be on ways in which to develop techniques and strategies to assist us in dealing with conflict when it occurs. Her presentation will be interactive and will include one exercise in conflict resolution.

Join us for an exceptional enrichment and networking opportunity at this breakfast event. Our speaker Agnes Doody, Ph.D., is an accomplished educator with decades of experience.

Agnes Doody commands strong interpersonal communication competences. She has taught on both the graduate and undergraduate level for more than four decades in the Department of Communication Studies at the University of Rhode Island, where she is now Professor Emeritus. She has specialized in negotiation and mediation, public speaking, interpersonal communication, intercultural communication and gender communication.

In addition, Agnes Doody is president of Arthur Associates, a consulting firm which focuses on business communication and management. As a consultant she has coached executives, mediated conflicts among and between senior management, has developed in-house training programs focusing on reducing workplace conflict resolution, has offered programs in public speaking, intercultural communication, business writing, and gender communication. She has also completed communication audits for senior management in several organizations.

Won't you join us for a morning of professional development and networking?
Annual Conference Planning meeting immediately following. All welcome.
